DEAR EDITOR...

More Parks Needed

Editor Torrance Press
There is a pitiful lack of space to play for children of Hawthorne Blvd., Sepulveda and those who have bought homes in the various tracts bordering vicinity in Torrance.
More and more homes are being built, and more and more youngsters are occupying these homes. There are no school grounds in the vicinity where children can play ball and run. The result: they either play in the streets where they are in danger of being hurt if not killed by passing motorists, or on the walks endangering people using the walks, or else they are playing on lawns and parkways, often ruining the sod, or making it impossible to have nice looking lawns and parkways, more often for their neighbors rather than their own parents. Indeed, sometimes neighbors are grieved because you tell them not to play on the grass.

It is certain that children need a place to play, and before all the land is gobbled up for building purposes some of it should be made available for playgrounds. Some tract developers provide a playground for smaller children, but not for those who like to play more strenuous games like ball.

There is plenty of vacant land on both sides of Hawthorne Blvd. that developers of the homes in this vicinity could and should provide a place for ball playing, tennis court and swimming. It would enhance their property values, making the tracts more desirable for families with children, and certainly by having playgrounds near home, the children will be kept off the street... and off lawns and parkways which have cost the owners considerable outlay of cash to get them and keep them that way, saying nothing of the labor.

Good Response

Editor Torrance Press
I should like to express to you my own personal appreciation for the help you have given me as staff aide chairman.

First there is the photograph in the newspaper which clearly established our existence in Torrance, and the exact location of our office.

Second, there is the article in the paper of the following week, asking for volunteers for my branch of the service.

I now have a full staff of office workers for our present hours, and if I get a few more volunteers, I shall be able to carry out my plans for keep-

16-Year-Old Victim of Hemophilia, Learning To Become Mechanic

Like most high school students, 16-year-old Richard Morris is a little apprehensive about the future he faces following graduation.
Now a freshman at Narbonne high school, he has hopes of being a machinist like his dad, Floyd, an employee of Perry Enterprise.

Hopefully, developed skill will prove the rewarding factor, since most of Richard's spare hours are spent in the machine shop which his father has set up behind their house at 1845 W. 247th street, Lomita. Already he has mastered the metal lathe and drill press to the point where he successfully handles a number of odd jobs that come his way.

Richard's apprehensions about the future, however, are based on an unusual factor—a rare blood disease which has caused him always to lead a somewhat restricted life.

His affliction is the strange and incurable malady of the blood called hemophilia, which means that the clotting factor is almost non-existent. Thus, he has learned to avoid the overly-active life that brings on bumps, bruises and cuts,—any of which can result in a prolonged and possibly fatal bleeding seizure.

Fortunately, there is a specially processed blood derivative called anti-hemophilia plasma. Because of this substance—the only one known which will stop a hemophiliac from bleeding to death—Richard's worries are considerably lessened.

Though there are worse hemophilia cases, Richard has need for the plasma at least three or four times a year, reports his mother, who went on to explain that all bleeding seizures occur without warning, and cannot always be attributed to any specific cause. "That is why it is important ing the office open for longer hours.

In this way, we can be of much more service to the community.

Not a day passes that I don't get a response in some manner to the appeal as you printed it. So far as the number of people responding is concerned, it is by far the greatest since I have been associated with the Red Cross in Torrance. Usually we feel fortunate if we received one or two calls.

Your kindness and cooperation is most gratefully noted and appreciated by me.

Sincerely yours,

that we have the assurance that the plasma is available when we need it—and thanks to Red Cross, we have that assurance."

During the past year, the Morris family discovered that the "best facilities available for caring for a hemophiliac are in Los Angeles, where the Red Cross Blood Center and the Hemophilia sufferers in the Los Angeles area lead as normal and happy lives as possible.

While Richard continues to plan for the future, Red Cross pledges to stand by him and thousands of others who depend upon a ready supply of blood and its derivatives for their very lives;—confident that the American people will continue to contribute blood and funds with equal generosity.
